Terms of Use of Publicly Available DPMO Timetable Data

Dopravní podnik města Olomouce, a.s. (hereinafter “DPMO”) sets out the following terms for the use of public transport timetable data published on its website (hereinafter “data”). These terms apply to all parties interested in using the data, including operators of digital information services and applications (hereinafter “data users”).

1. Scope of Consent

DPMO consents to the use of the timetable data it makes publicly available, including use in commercially operated services. This consent applies to published data regardless of the specific data format, in particular GTFS and JDF, and any other timetable data formats that may be published. In particular, the consent includes:

- downloading data from publicly accessible DPMO sources;
- importing stop information, including stop names and geographic coordinates, into data users’ own databases;
- processing and storing timetables, services and scheduled departure times;
- displaying transport information to end users of the data users’ own services and applications;
- regularly updating the data obtained.

This consent is granted free of charge, on a non-exclusive and non-transferable basis, for the uses specified above. It applies only to rights that DPMO is entitled to dispose of.

2. Attribution of the Data Source

When presenting transport information, the data user must appropriately acknowledge its source, for example as follows: “Transport data source: Dopravní podnik města Olomouce, a.s. – www.dpmo.cz”. Source attribution may be included, for example, in the section of the service dedicated to data sources or legal information, and must be reasonably accessible to end users.

3. Data Storage and Updates

DPMO consents to the storage of published data in the data user’s databases and to its regular updating, including automated downloads. Downloads must be carried out in a reasonable manner that does not place a disproportionate load on DPMO’s technical infrastructure. The data user is responsible for the correct processing, interpretation and updating of the data in its service or application.

4. Timeliness and Accuracy of Information

The published timetable data primarily contains information about planned public transport operations. It may not reflect extraordinary operating incidents, current delays, service disruptions or other operational changes. DPMO is not liable for any errors in the published data or any resulting damage, nor for errors and consequential damage arising from the processing, interpretation or presentation of such data by third parties. The data user must ensure that the presentation of the data is not misleading and does not suggest that it represents actual departures or real-time operations where this is not the case.

5. Further Use and Provision of Data

This consent applies to any data user who complies with these terms and is not tied to any particular service or operator. Without DPMO’s prior written consent, a data user may not provide the data files obtained to other entities as a standalone data product or transfer the authorization granted under these terms to another person. This does not affect the display and provision of processed transport information to end users as part of the data user’s own service or application. Any other person may independently obtain the data from a publicly accessible DPMO source and use it subject to these terms.

6. Term and Withdrawal of Consent

This consent is granted for an indefinite period. DPMO reserves the right to amend these terms or withdraw its consent for future use, without stating a reason. DPMO will announce any amendment or withdrawal by publishing it on its website, generally at least 30 days before it takes effect. In the event of a serious breach of these terms, DPMO may revoke the authorization of the relevant data user with immediate effect. Upon termination of the authorization, the affected user must cease using the data under that authorization and remove copies from its operational systems, unless it has another legal basis for their continued retention or use.

7. Final Provisions

These terms do not establish any right to uninterrupted provision or availability of data, nor any obligation on DPMO to provide individual technical support. Use of the data does not establish a business partnership with DPMO or entitle the data user to present its service or application as an official DPMO service. DPMO reserves the right to update the data and change its structure, data formats, scope and method of publication. The data and related information are published on the DPMO website: www.dpmo.cz. The specific URLs of data files may change.
